

Proper Kudos for Giant Food

The Washington Post

Thursday, June 18, 2009

What would you do with $100,000? The Giant Food store on Alabama Avenue in Southeast could have done so much for itself -- gifts to employees, upgrades to its store -- but no. With its share of the money from recently selling the winning Powerball ticket, Giant chose to donate the entire amount to the Capital Area Food Bank "Lottery Bonus to Go to Food Bank," [Metro, May 28].

Thank you, Giant, for your generosity. The story was buried inside the paper in a small paragraph at the bottom of a page. This was front-page news. As more and more people are relying on food banks, this was a wonderful gift.
