WHO WE ARE

The Capital Area Food Bank is the region's largest hunger relief organization and the hub for food sourcing, food distribution and nutrition education across the Washington metro area. In Washington, D.C. and the six counties of MD & VA that surround it, there are nearly 700,000 individuals at risk of hunger; about 150,000 are children.

In FY 2014, the CAFB distributed 42 million pounds of food —more than 35 million meals — to 540,300 individuals through direct service and a network of more than 500 partner agencies. The CAFB service area includes: Washington D.C.; Montgomery County, MD; Prince George's County, MD; Fairfax County, VA; Prince William County, VA; Arlington County, VA; and The City of Alexandria, VA.

FROM PRESIDENT AND CEO

Nancy E. Roman

DEAR SUPPORTERS,

As I begin my third year leading the Capital Area Food Bank, I again extend my heartfelt thanks.

Your generosity, compassion, and commitment have made this — our 34th year — a benchmark year for many reasons, and I am deeply grateful.

Reflecting back on the year, we have made two major shifts in the way that we approach our work. One of these is the regional focus that we are using as we get food to children, seniors, and families. We have aligned our teams around each of the areas in which we operate: the District of Columbia, Montgomery and Prince George's counties in Maryland, and Fairfax, Prince William, and Arlington counties, as well as the City of Alexandria, in Virginia. With staff dedicated to each region, we are well-positioned to understand the unique needs, challenges, and opportunities for our partners in these areas, and the people they serve. Our regional focus also allows us to better engage policymakers and other community stakeholders on the issue of hunger, and to form partnerships that leverage local resources towards the common goal of solving it.

The second of these significant shifts is a real commitment to wellness, beginning with the hard work of improving our own food inventory. As part of that effort, we have eliminated full-calorie soda and are working to eliminate sugary snacks that can contribute to diet-related disease. We have also stepped up our already strong commitment to vegetables.

This year, we distributed 42 million pounds of food to children, families, and seniors in need. But we looked hard at the content of our inventory and worked to improve it. About one third of all food distributed was fresh fruits and vegetables — more of them green. We increased our distribution of frozen vegetables and distributed freezers to partner agencies that didn't have them; added food that partners had requested, including beans, fish, canned chicken, and whole grain products; and worked assiduously to lower salt and added sugar.

Families enjoyed our very first season of crops coming from local farmers thanks to a grant from the Marriott Foundation. The Fruits and Vegetables Fund for Greater Washington sources watermelon, cantaloupe, squash, beans, apples, potatoes, and a variety of other fresh produce from local growers in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. We then distribute those fruits and vegetables to our largest 22 food assistance partners feeding those in need, including DC Central Kitchen, Martha's Table, and Allen Chapel. Buying local means fresher food for the folks we are serving. And planning our crop purchase with local farmers means these partners can plan on having fresh produce for the people that they are reaching.

We also brought our urban demonstration garden into full bloom and production this year, growing tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, green beans, blackberries, raspberries, and herbs, using the space to teach our partner agencies how to increase their food growing capacity.

Looking to the year ahead, we plan to continue improving and expanding upon our demonstration garden space. We also plan to pursue other innovative ideas, from engaging volunteers in repacking large bins of produce to creating community produce hubs.

At the food bank, we are passionately committed to reducing hunger in our region. As we do that, we more deeply appreciate the powerful link between food and wellness and are doing all we can to help those we serve live well.

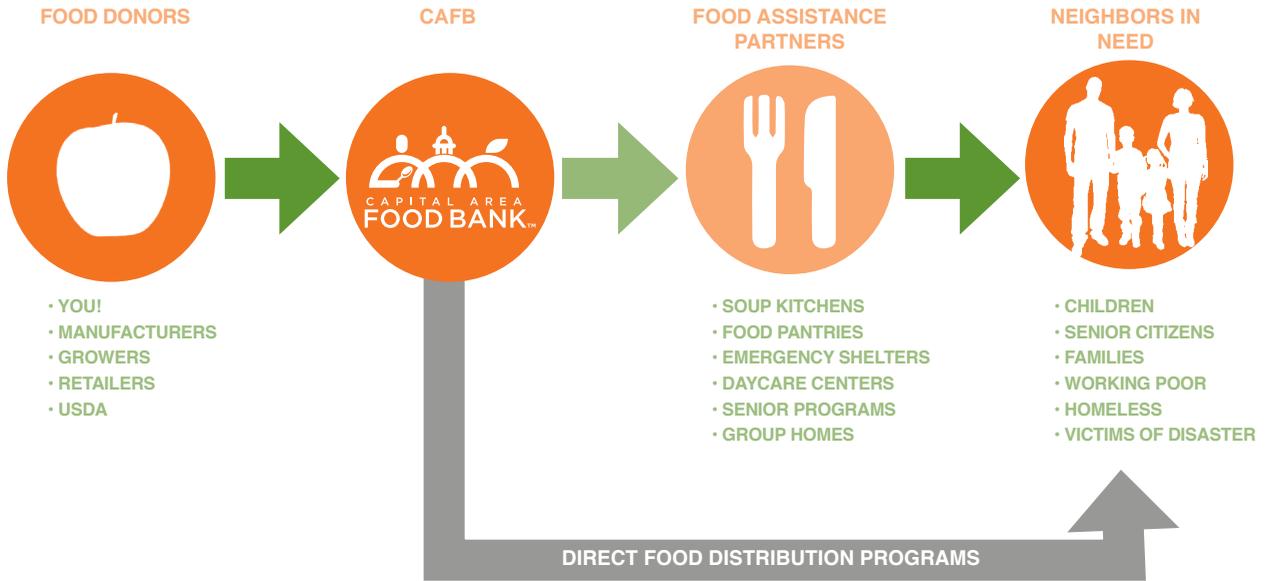

I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your support in that critical mission.

Sincerely,

WHAT WE DO

Feeding the Community

HOW WE DO IT

Our Partners and Distribution Programs

FOOD ASSISTANCE PARTNERS

Our Food Assistance Partners work on the ground to offer food from the CAFB to neighbors in need; these partners include faith-based organizations, food pantries, soup kitchens, emergency shelters, senior programs, daycare centers and more.

Our Direct Food Distribution Programs complement the offerings of our food assistance partners:

MOBILE MARKETS

We provide fruit, vegetables, bread and more to any resident of high-need neighborhoods at no cost, by delivering to safe, public places for pickup.

KIDS AFTER SCHOOL FEEDING PROGRAMS

We provide free, healthy meals and snacks to students attending after school enrichment programs.

COMMUNITY MARKETPLACES

At this monthly farmer's market-inspired event, we offer fresh, seasonal produce at no cost; health, housing, and other service providers are on site as resources for our clients.

KIDS SUMMER FEEDING PROGRAMS

We provide healthy meals and snacks in the summer at sites including faith-based organizations, camps and recreation centers.

WEEKEND BAGS

We provide kid-friendly bags of groceries weekly for children to ensure they have enough to eat when not at school.

FAMILY MARKETS

We provide families with fresh fruits, vegetables and non-perishable healthy groceries each month in their children's schools. Food is offered market-style, and parents can choose the items they want, along with recipes to put ingredients to use

SENIOR BROWN BAGS

We provide income-qualified seniors with a bag of groceries monthly, along with recipes and nutrition education materials.

GROCERY PLUS

We provide eligible DC seniors with a bag of healthy groceries each month. In summer, seniors also receive produce vouchers redeemable at participating farmers markets.

NUTRITION EDUCATION

Our Nutrition Education courses accompany food distributed in the community. CAFB volunteers teach food selection, budgeting, cooking and food growing to food assistance partners and the neighbors they serve.

“The faith-based organizations we work with in Ward 7 distributed over 601,000 pounds of food in 2013. Dividing that into 30 pound bags, that’s 20,000 times volunteers handed a big bag of food to someone in need. Picture that!”

—AMY HEDGES, DC REGIONAL COORDINATOR

ADVOCATING FOR FOOD ACCESS

“EDUCATE, EMPOWER, AND ENLIGHTEN”. These words from the food bank’s mission statement articulate the organization’s commitment not only to feeding people, but to bringing about systemic change through advocacy. And as a part of its regional approach to addressing hunger needs, the food bank has brought out advocacy efforts home to DC, Maryland and Virginia, engaging city, county, and state officials around the issue of hunger and how to solve it.

In northern Virginia, for instance, the staff of the food bank’s Lorton facility makes education and advocacy a daily activity, seeing every interaction as an opportunity to exchange ideas. The team participates in a number of coalitions, including the Greater Prince William Food Council, the Greater Prince William Human Services Coalition, the Fairfax County Food Providers Network, and the Federation of Virginia Food Banks. In addition to their coalition work, the Virginia regional team engages legislators one-on-one, and has instituted a day of service for Virginia elected officials.

Similarly, the food bank’s Maryland regional team has cultivated strong partnerships for the food bank’s Family Market program. Both the Montgomery County Council and Montgomery Public Schools contributed funding to expand the program to more high need schools. The Prince George’s County Council views Family Markets as a critical component of their Transforming Neighborhoods Initiative, the purpose of which is to uplift six County neighborhoods that face significant economic and educational challenges. The Maryland regional team is also a strong contributor to both the Montgomery County Food Council and the Prince George’s Food Equity Council and has encouraged both groups to advocate for improved food access in food deserts.

In Washington, DC, the regional team has provided significant contributions to the city’s burgeoning food policy efforts. The team supported legislation that doubled the minimum SNAP benefit for DC residents, required the city to provide meal services to students on snow days, and enabled the creation of the city’s first food policy council headed by a Food Policy Director. The DC regional team has also provided guidance around two of the city’s major strategies: Sustainable DC and Age Friendly DC, which lay a framework for a more equitable, livable city.

WE'RE ALL EARS!

SHARING A MEAL WITH someone is one of the best ways to get to know them. So in 2014, the Capital Area Food Bank continued a tradition started by CEO Nancy E. Roman of holding a series of winter lunches with our partners in neighborhoods throughout DC, Maryland and Virginia. CAFB staff listened while partners shared challenges faced by the people they serve, types of food clients request, and new ways CAFB can power hunger relief. These conversations helped to inform CAFB's priorities going forward.

At last year's lunch sessions, partners brought to our attention the need for specific foods, with a focus on healthier shelf stable products, more fresh produce, and more meat. We took this information and developed a list of Core Foods—healthy, shelf stable foods that are now always available on our menu. We also committed to making more meat and fresh produce available at our distribution centers.

The forums also serve as an opportunity for partners to connect, network, and share resources. In Montgomery County, for instance, one attendee was struggling to find volunteers to pick up food to serve her neighborhood. Dorothy Boddie, director of Allen

Leaders of Sistas United, a CAFB food assistance partner in Suitland, MD.

Chapel AME Church food pantry nearby, was also in attendance and immediately offered to assist. Now, in addition to trips she makes to the CAFB for her own food pantry, Ms. Boddie regularly helps her new friend to pack up items for her program as well.

The feedback from these sessions has proven so valuable that the food bank has expanded the model, hosting lunches for seniors who participate in its Grocery Plus (formerly Commodity Supplemental Food Program) and Senior Brown Bag programs.

Effectively meeting the need of our partners, and the people who access food from them, is always a priority for the food bank. The CAFB is committed to keeping our ears open by hosting listening lunches each year, learning about the changing landscape of hunger, and ensuring a personal connection with those we serve.

A REGIONAL APPROACH: Virginia

A GROWING COMMITMENT TO GOOD FOOD & WELLNESS

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN HEALTHY

food and health is increasingly evident. In 2013-2014, the CAFB participated in the year-long Hunger in America study through its partnership with Feeding America, where staff surveyed food assistance partners and the clients they serve to assess the state of hunger needs in CAFB's service area. Among other findings were these compelling statistics:

- 70 percent of households served reported "purchasing inexpensive, unhealthy" food as the common coping strategy to hunger
- 22 percent of households served had a family member with diabetes
- 48 percent of households served had a family member with high blood pressure

CAFB is responding to this need by providing increasingly healthful food that is low in sugar and sodium, and high in fiber. We are also continuing to emphasize the distribution of fruits and vegetables.

Beyond food, the CAFB's 500 food assistance partners often ask for nutrition education resources, so CAFB is moving forward with a wellness model that can reach every food assistance partner and client across its vast service area. CAFB staff and volunteer chefs have worked to create more than 80 Recipes from the CAFB Kitchen, all in English and Spanish. Each recipe allows for a home cooked meal that's low in sodium, low in sugar, budget-friendly, easy and certainly delicious.

of households the food bank serves report “purchasing inexpensive, unhealthy” food as the common coping strategy for hunger

301

leaders of food assistance partners participated in our Agency Achievement Academy workshops, which teach our partners about healthful eating, food growing, volunteer recruitment, and more of 383 children, teens and adults who participated in our 6-week Cooking Matters® nutrition education series are eating more fruits and vegetables

The year finished with a strong call for wellness leadership at the CAFB’s annual Hunger Summit, held at the organization’s DC facility on April 25, 2014. Patty Stonesifer, President and CEO of food assistance partner Martha’s Table and former CEO of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, joined Clint Smith, a teacher at Parkdale High School, in conversation to discuss how we can better the health of the communities we serve.

Providing wellness resources is an increasingly significant part of the food bank’s strategy for serving the region. With the average CAFB client acquiring our food nine times per year (as reported by the 2014 Hunger in America Study), the opportunity is huge to provide health interventions through food and cooking inspiration at each touch point.

FOOD FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

Regional Child Hunger Statistics

of children across Northern Virginia live in houses that lack sufficient access to healthy food

27%

of children under the age of 18 lives in food insecure households in DC, making it the sixth most food insecure state in the nation

— PRESTON, CLIENT SERVED BY CAFB

DATA DRIVEN STRATEGIES To Strengthen the Hunger Safety Net

THEY SAY YOU CAN'T manage what you can't measure. In 2014, the CAFB took this idea to heart as we began to focus our efforts on collecting and using data to drive a deeper understanding of the need in the locations we serve; the amounts and types of food we distribute; and the people that we are feeding.

First, we are creating a mapping tool that will allow for a visual representation of our presence and impact in the community, as well as unmet need in the region. We have used this information to begin channeling our resources towards areas that have high need but which we are currently reaching with low amounts of food.

As part of our efforts to contribute to the health and wellness of the community we serve, we have also created a tool that helps us to assess the nutritional value of our food stream. Based upon sugar, salt, and fiber content, our food receives a ranking as Food or Food+. This has allowed us to respond more efficiently to partner demand; and work with donors to increase the nutritional quality of our food donations.

We are also working to better understand the people who are accessing our services. For instance, at our Community Marketplaces, which are free monthly markets for low income individuals in DC, Maryland, and Virginia, each patron has a bar coded key tag.

These tags allow us to measure unduplicated attendance at our markets, and, for the first time, to count the children, seniors, and veterans served by a market in addition to the individual who may attend for his or her family.

This commitment to data will continue to expand over the course of the next fiscal year, as we grow the data systems and structures required to help us better serve the community.

FOOD FROM THE BAR

Engaging the Legal Community in Hunger Awareness

THE 2014 WASHINGTON LEGAL campaign against hunger raised an unprecedented $130,000 in one month. Under the leadership of former U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, DLA Senior Counsel Carl Vacketta, and Mark Ruge of K&L Gates, proceeds enabled the Capital Area Food Bank to provide more than 300,000 meals for residents in need.

Formerly known as Outlaw Hunger, organizations in D.C. adopted Food From the Bar—a national grassroots movement led by legal communities in more than a dozen cities nationwide—in spring of 2014.

A hallmark of the campaign is the fun and creative ways legal professionals give back. For instance, Bracewell & Giuliani was recognized for creating “Dareoke”—a competition where one participant bets another to sing.

This campaign is part of Capital Area Food Bank’s strategic objective to engage the community in awareness about hunger and how to solve it. Throughout the campaign, firms are encouraged to volunteer at the food bank and facilitate conversations about hunger in the community.

FEDERAL EMPLOYEES RESPOND TO SUMMER HUNGER

HUNGER DOESN'T TAKE A BREAK in the summer. With children out of school, household food needs can often be greater during this time, even while donations to food banks tend to drop. So federal employees, armed with a healthy dose of competition and a mission to provide support for our community, have been responding to this need with a summer long food drive, resulting in hundreds of thousands of healthy meals for those we serve.

As a response to a decline in feeding programs throughout the summer months, Rep. Frank Wolf and John Berry, former Director of Office of Personal Management, teamed up in 2009 to launch the Feds Feed Families Campaign. The USDA took the torch in 2013, leading the campaign with support from the Chief Human Capital Officers Council and other agency partners.

Through this campaign, federal agencies across the United States partner with local food banks from June to August to collect and provide healthy food donations, striving to reach increasing food poundage goals each year. Participants have gotten creative in order to bring in more donations, hosting everything from golf tournaments to ice cream socials, and healthy competition among agencies has fostered collaboration as groups share best practices and ideas for increasing donor engagement. Nationally, over 25 million pounds of food have been collected since the beginning of the campaign.

In the Washington DC area, we have been impressed by the local participation. Just last summer, the Capital Area Food Bank received over 600,000 pounds of food, including canned proteins, low sodium canned vegetables, and fruits in their own juices, making this food drive one of the largest annual drives benefitting the organization.

DONOR PROFILE: CARL VACKETTA

“Always Room for One More”

CARL VACKETTA, AN ATTORNEY

who has long championed hunger and other important issues through his work on the board of the food bank and other nonprofit organizations in the human services and education sectors, has recently retired from the firm DLA Piper after a 45 year career in government contracts law.

Carl traces his desire to give back—which has prompted him to be a significant contributor to the food bank through the years as well as a leader in the legal community's response to hunger—to the early influences of his family.

His grandfather, upon immigrating from Italy, first settled in Louisiana and cut sugarcane to support his family. Moving to escape persecution in the 1890s, he settled in the central Illinois town of Westville, working in a coal mine before opening his own grocery store. Men arriving to work in the town's coal mines often had nowhere to eat or sleep, and Carl vividly remembers the stories he heard growing up about his grandparents inviting miners to join them at the family dinner table. “There's always room for one more”, his grandparents would say. That attitude of generosity would stick with Carl throughout his life.

GIVING BACK

Carl received both his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Illinois, directly attributing the opportunity to do so to his father's hard work and long hours at the same grocery store that his grandfather had started. While still in college, Carl decided that if he could help those around them, he would. And he has, starting with his support of his alma mater and, later, his involvement with the food bank.

Thirteen years ago, Carl began volunteering at the food bank with colleagues from DLA Piper. In 2003, he joined the organization's board, and has served in a variety of board leadership roles since, including as a member of its Executive Committee in the capacity of Secretary. Carl was an active contributor to the food bank's capital campaign and efforts around the food bank's construction of and move to a new building in 2012, and in 2014, he was instrumental in raising over $130,000 from the DC legal community through the Food From the Bar campaign (see story, page 18).

PAYING IT FORWARD

With his retirement approaching, Carl has done some estate planning. Those plans include the Capital Area Food Bank as one of his beneficiaries. In Carl's words: “When one was raised as I was, and received the benefits and rewards that I did, at some point you have to decide how you will give back — whether it's a lot or a little.”

The food bank is grateful to Carl — and those like him — who have chosen to support the food bank and the wider community by giving generously of their time, resources, and selves.

BEQUESTS FISCAL YEAR 2013-2014

We recognize the commitment and leadership of the following individuals who have decided to make planned gifts to the Capital Area Food Bank. If you have included the food bank in your estate plans and are not listed, please contact Claudia Morris at 202-644-9859, or email her at cmorris@capitalareafoodbank.org so that we may properly acknowledge your kindness.
