HUNGER IS HERE.
In the District of Columbia, 84,380 residents struggle to get the food they need. Of those, 32% are children.

HUNGER HURTS.

• 48 percent of households served by the food bank have a family member with high blood pressure, and 22 percent of households served by the food bank have a family member with diabetes (Feeding America, 2014).

• Compared to food secure seniors, food insecure seniors are 53 percent more likely to report a heart attack, 52 percent more likely to develop asthma, and 40 percent more likely to report an experience of congestive heart failure (Feeding America and the National Foundation to End Senior Hunger, 2013).

• Food insecure children are more likely to experience stomachaches, headaches, colds, ear infections, and fatigue. They are sick more often, recover more slowly, and are more likely to be hospitalized (Feeding America, 2014).

• 70 percent of households served by the food bank reported “purchasing inexpensive, unhealthy” food as the common coping strategy to hunger (Feeding America, 2014).
